Undergraduate Research Opportunity

PROJECT

Food Insecurity and the Food Landscape in Arizona

Prof. Joan McGregor
Philosophy

This project, “Food Insecurity and the Food Landscape in Arizona,” requires a complete analysis of the state of the food system within Arizona. Particularly, the focus of the research will include the volume and location of children with food insecurity and current responses in place. The project will culminate with a brief synopsis of the Arizonan food landscape.

STUDENT

Research assistant’s duties:
The student researcher will be required to perform independent research and write in a clear fashion for a public audience.

Required skills or qualifications:
Research and writing abilities, ability to work on one’s own and take initiative in locating data.

Skills student will acquire:
Developed research and writing skills, knowledge of the problems of food insecurity and possible solutions. Ability to develop materials for the wider public.